General Education Board Report

It has been an incredibly busy and productive time for our Instructional Coaching Team as we prepare to support educators across our local districts in launching a successful new school year. Over the past several weeks, our coaches have spent countless hours collaborating, planning, and developing professional learning opportunities designed to be meaningful, relevant, and immediately useful for the educators we serve.

I continue to be impressed by the thoughtfulness and dedication this team brings to the work. They have been intentional about creating opportunities that go beyond simply sharing information. Our goal is to provide experiences where educators can engage, reflect, collaborate with one another, and leave feeling better prepared and supported as they return to their classrooms and buildings.

There is a tremendous amount of work that happens behind the scenes to make these learning opportunities successful, and I am incredibly grateful for the time, creativity, and energy our coaches have invested. Most importantly, their work continues to be centered on supporting educators so they can create the very best learning experiences for students.

As we get ready to welcome staff back and begin another school year, I am excited about what this team has created and even more excited to see the learning, conversations, and connections that will come from it. It is a great reminder of what can happen when talented people come together around a shared purpose.
