- Island Avenue Elementary School, Individualized Reading Instruction

The individualized program affords First Grade students extra time and attention to establish good reading skills and practices at an early age.

- J. Milton Jeffrey Elementary School, Touchdown for Character

This program works in conjunction with members of the football team from Daniel Hand High School. They go to Jeffrey School on home game days, wearing their team jerseys, and read to the students. The books they read focus on character building and this is a program greatly enjoyed by both groups of students.

- Kathleen H. Ryerson Elementary School, Connecticut Loves to Read Week

This is a week long program held each February devoted to several different reading events, including guest readers. This is a program all the students look forward to as a way to celebrate reading.

Mrs. Britton stated that some sophomore students take their CAPT tests during exam times and said in some cases, they try to substitute the CAPT tests for exams.

5. Superintendent's Report

5.1. NEASC Reports from Visiting Teams: Commendations and Recommendations

Mr. Klein reported on the recent accreditation by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges of the three elementary and two middle schools in Madison. He stated that this accreditation gives Madison the distinction of being one of only six school districts in Connecticut in which all the schools in the district are accredited. Mr. Klein stated that this is no small accomplishment, and a testament to the administration and staff of the Madison Public Schools.

Mr. Klein next invited the principals of these schools to share some of the findings of the reports.

Ms. Mona Goodman, Principal of J. Milton Jeffery Elementary School; Ms. Nicole Rinehardt, Assistant Principal of J. Milton Jeffrey Elementary School; Ms. Kathy Nutley, Principal of Island Avenue Elementary School and Dr. Paul Sinicrope, Principal of Kathleen H. Ryerson Elementary school were all in attendance.

They came forward to address the Board as a group, because as Dr. Sinicrope explained, there was a great deal of commonality between the reports for the three elementary schools.

Ms. Goodman stated that the reports were a culmination of a two year process which involved all faculty. She went on to say that the process allowed all staff to look at things they might not have otherwise, and gave structure to school development plans. She said the report was very positive and true, and validation for the staff of all the good work that is going on.

Some of the commendations that were given in the reports for all three elementary schools were outline by Dr. Sinicrope:

- Recognition of the school environment as very positive for parents, staff, and especially students.
- Implementation of the RTI (Response to Intervention) Model, which provides individualized instruction to all students.

- The high level of collaboration between teachers and support staff.
- The placement of a Paraprofessional in each elementary classroom. It was stated that Paraprofessionals are key in the successful implementation of the RTI model.

Ms. Nutley reported on other findings in the NEASC study, such as the correlation between the high achievement on Connecticut Mastery Tests as a direct result of the RTI Model. She stated that the report recognized that each of the three elementary schools have a dedicated Reading and Math Specialist. She also stated that the report looked favorably on the open door policies maintained in all the elementary schools. Ms. Nutley also stated that the high expectations the Administration places on the staff had a direct impact on the successful outcome of these studies.

Ms. Rinehardt stated that with success comes the need for more / improve space utilization and staff development. The report gives recommendations and the district will work toward these improvements.

In summary, Ms. Goodman stated that there were no real surprises in the final NEASC reports, and that as a district we are aware of our strengths and of places where we can do better. The staff has recognized the value of the two year process and is very prideful of the results.

Atty. Klaskin commented on the fact that NEASC accreditation is mandatory for high schools, but not for the elementary and middle school level. He commended and thanked the principals for their efforts during this two year process.

Ms. Coffey reiterated how the placement of a Paraprofessional in each classroom is instrumental in meeting the RTI Model and further stated that Paraprofessionals are integral in the Board of Education's strategy of inclusion.

Ms. Gowanlock asked about the space recommendations and Ms. Goodman responded that they were particular to each building.

Atty. Sellers asked how the findings of the study will be shared with parents. Dr. Sinicrope responded that to start, the results will be brought to the Parent Teacher Organizations and a decision will then be made on how to proceed to share the findings with the community.

The middle school administrative team then addressed the Board as a group. In attendance were Ms. Julie Phelps, Principal of Dr. Robert H. Brown Middle School; Ms. Kathryn Hart, Assistant Principal of Dr. Robert H. Brown Middle School; Mr. Frank Henderson, Principal of Walter C. Polson Middle School; and Ms. Jill Hale, Assistant Principal of Walter C. Polson Middle School.

Ms. Phelps stated that many of the commendations and recommendations in the middle school reports were similar to those in the elementary school reports. Also, like the elementary staff, the middle school staff recognized the value of the process in self reflection. She stated that the staff constructed the time they spent on the study around the issues they thought most valuable. Ms. Phelps also reported that even if staff members didn't agree on all points, they did all agree on the process itself.

Ms. Hart further explained that the staff worked collaboratively on things that were most important. She also stated that bringing the elementary and middle school models together gave the staff an opportunity to better focus on what they wish to achieve.

Some of the commendations highlighted in the middle school reports were:

- The staff; their efforts and instructional practices, in particular in interpreting curriculum and working collaboratively.
- The support shown for increasing extracurricular and co-curricular activities.

- The compassion demonstrated by the staff and their efforts to instill core values in the students.
- The support of the district in providing a dedicated Special Education teacher to each core team, which makes for a seamless integration of Special Education and General Education.
- The school's commitment to providing a safe environment for its students.
- The community; the support and commitment of the parents and Board of Education.

Mr. Henderson first thanked the faculty, stating that the entire process was faculty driven. He then thanked the Program Coordinators, on behalf of all staff, for their hard work during the two year study.

Mr. Henderson stated that pride in Madison Public Schools is there everyday – from the students to the staff and administration. He and Ms. Hale outlined some of the commendations in the Polson report:

- The expansion of course offerings.
- The four coordinator positions, placed across both Brown and Polson, which allow for better focus on course content.
- The two computer labs.
- The instructional workshops and professional development afforded to staff.
- The leadership and organization; the Administration is very visible and accessible.
- A school climate that is inviting to all.
- Polson's work in conjunction with Madison Youth Services.
- Service providers having their own dedicated space at Polson, allowing them to work with students and parents in the most appropriate manner.

Ms. Hale discussed the school improvement process. She stated that she is on the NEASC Commission and the process is designed to be faculty driven, and is very intense. She stated that the end result is the staff walking away with a shared mission and vision for their school.

Mr. Henderson then expressed his appreciation to the community at large, the Parent Teacher Organization and the Board of Education for their support during the accreditation process. Finally, he thanked Ms. Rutlin, who was involved in the process "from start to finish".

Atty. Klaskin pointed out that a lot of districts would use this process to implement a Strategic Plan, while Madison sought the accreditation in addition to having already implemented a Strategic Plan.

Mr. Klein concluded the discussion by stating that all five NEASC reports came back with the highest level of evaluation, and that Madison has set the model for NEASC accreditation in the State of Connecticut.

Mr. Klein and Ms. Rutlin then presented the Principals and Assistant Principals with banners proclaiming the NEASC Accreditation to be displayed in each of their schools.
